

Donovan Jackson, Vice President
Willis HRH

Donovan Jackson is a Vice President with Willis Construction Practice division within the Willis HRH of Seattle and Willis HRH Risk and Insurance Corporation of Los Angeles offices. He is a Certified Safety Professional, Certified Hazardous Materials Manager, Certified Environmental Training and holds a certificate in occupational safety and health law from the American Institute of Applied Management. With 31 years industry experience, his specialization is in the integration of safety management, quality assurance practices and risk management methodologies into the construction business process, which includes organizational assurance and development for both field and corporate environments.

His current responsibilities include loss control oversight of several large private and public entity OCIP construction projects, in which he consults with executive officers, senior managers, frontline supervision and the associated workforce. He has had the loss control/risk management oversight of 40% of the top 25 home building developers in the nation. His current specializations include residential (single, multi-habitational), retail facility construction, commercial construction (mid-rise and high rise Type I, II and III structures), petrochemical structural and pipeline construction, OCIP light rail transit construction, energy power facility demolition, underground and tunneling construction and environmental management assurance.

Donovan's titles have included teaching as an adjunct professor at the University of Alaska/Mining and Petroleum Training Service. He has also been a guest speaker on "construction safety methodologies" at CalPoly Technical University and the Kellogg Institute in Pomona, California in 2002, 2003 and 2004. He recently taught as an adjunct instructor with the Del Webb School of Construction at Arizona State University. He is a national speaker on subjects regarding loss control and risk management issues of today's construction workforce and strategic loss control management planning.
